And not a single sound in response. Only the monotonous buzz of the escalator yes

Translated with an Introduction by Philip Vellacott Four plays-Ion and Helen in prose and The Bacchae and The Women of Troy with dialogue rewritten in verse-depict the guilt and suffering of war, and the subsequent loss of faith. So soon, however, as logic declines this role and strives after complete self-sufficiency, so soon as logic attempts to be the conclusion rather than the medium of understanding, it becomes as obstructive to the preservation, extension, and unification of knowledge as bureaucratic schematism may be to the aggregate interests of the group.
